INTRODUCTION OF WATER RESOURCES DEPARTMENT

Andhra Pradesh is the fourth largest state in India with a population of 84.6 million and a geographical area of 27.44 million hectare.

Andhra Pradesh stands at a high pedestal in the irrigated map in India with its rich water resources with major rivers like Godavari, Krishna, Pennar and many more medium and minor rivers.

Water is a prime natural resource, a basic human need and a precious asset. Its importance is very high particularly for the agriculture is the main resource for them. If there is water in the village, farmers in the village will be extremely happy and their livehood will also be improved.

There is a wide variation of the rainfall between the different districts of the State. The six north coastal Districts and three north Telangana Districts receive more than 1,000 mm per annum, while a scanty rainfall below 700 mm is registered in Kurnool, Ananthapur and Kadapa Districts. The lowest is recorded in Ananthapur District (568 mm), while Vizayanagaram District has the highest rainfall (1,159 mm) on an average.

Agriculture in Andhra Pradesh is largely dependent on rainfall. Of the states geographical area, 47% is under cultivation and the net shown area is about 9.84 Mha. Of which 6.46 Mha, is Irrigated Majority of the population is dependent on agriculture for household level livelihoods. About 80.0 lakh farmers are covered under irrigated agriculture.

The State's share of dependable flows from the river Systems is estimated ar 2769 TMC. This breaks up into 1480 TMC from the Godavari River System, 811 TMC form the Krishna, 99 TMC from the Pennar and the rest 379 TMC from the other small rivers.

Out of the 1480 TMC available in Godavari Systems about 740 TMC is under utilization at present. The entire dependable yield or river Krishna is almost fully harnessed through the construction of several Irrigation projects, Irrigation projects are the main resources for utilizing the water for agriculture and to project from drought without which the water will go waste into the sea. Keeping in view of the large quantity of water availability in the Godavari system and also in some other rivers, Government now consider that construction of Irrigation projects is their top priority.

Thus, Andhra Pradesh Irrigation scenario presents a huge spectrum of information on its irrigation development and other related activities from which the people can get benefited.
